

Open Water Diver Course Information

The PADI Open Water Diver Course is the world's most internationally recognised, entry-level diver course. With PADI centres in over 160 countries, your qualification will allow you rent or purchase SCUBA equipment and participate in diving activities worldwide.

Course Content

The course consists of knowledge development, skill development and open water dives. The knowledge development is covered through self-study, audio-visual presentations and quizzes. Skill development takes place in a pool or confined body of water and the final phase of your course are completed through four open water dives at our dive centre in the clear, sheltered waters of Little Killary Bay. This phase allows you gain the experience necessary to dive independently in the open water environment.

We offer the course in two different formats:

Dive Holiday

Enjoy a week in Renvyle while completing the entire course in five days. Knowledge and skill development are completed from Monday to Wednesday and your open water dives take place on Thursday and Friday. Schedule for 2007 over.

Modular

If you cannot take a week off you can complete the course over two weekends. Begin by completing your knowledge and skill development over a Bank holiday week end, take a weekend off and finish your course by completing the four open water dives two weeks later. Flexible course scheduling allows you complete your course when you've got the time!

Cost

The course cost is €90, which includes all your tuition materials, equipment hire and your PADI certification.

Booking

Booking is by €5 deposit. Upon receipt of your deposit we will send you your PADI "Crew Pack" which contains your tuition materials so you can start learning straight away!

National Geographic Diver

Complete an extra two dives after your Openwater Diver course and become a National Geographic Diver. With this you join an elite group of underwater adventurers, acting as marine ambassadors. These two dives focus on buoyancy and navigation skills. You will also complete an underwater project of your choice. Cost of the National Geographic Diver (includes Openwater qualification) is €840, and includes all your Openwater Diver material, a glossy National Geographic logbook binder, almanac and DVD. Dates for this course are overleaf.
